DETAILED ACTION

Response to Arguments

1. Applicant's arguments with respect to claims 1,6,8,11,13,19 have been considered but are moot in view of the new ground(s) of rejection. Applicant argues, Toyoda does not teach that the cause of the transmission failure is an interruption in electrical power. Upon further review, the examiner has incorporated Hiromutsu (JP 11-068992) to further teach this limitation.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

2. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

3. Claims 1,6,8,11,13,19 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Toyoda et al (US 6,229,884) in view of Hiromutsu (JP 11-068992).

Toyoda discloses, regarding claim 1, which is representative of claims 8 and 13, Toyoda teaches in a system for electronically transmitting to an electronic mail (e-mail) server electronic data derived from optically scanning a document, a method for recovering from an interruption in electrical power causing a failure in the complete transmission of the electronic data to the e-mail server, the method comprising: storing the electronic data to a non-volatile storage device (5:40-42), transmitting the electronic data to the e-mail server (5:37-59); removing the electronic data from the storage device after the electronic data has been completely transmitted to the e-mail server (7:39-56), determining if the electronic data is present on the storage device after the interruption in electrical power.

Toyoda does not disclose expressly if the electrical data is determined to be present on the storage device after the interruption in electrical power, resuming the transmission of the electronic data to the e-mail server or restarting the transmission of the electronic data to the email server.

Hiromutsu discloses when a main power supply fails, it is checked whether or not data reception is disabled. When it is detected that the data sent at present is an electronic mail and when the power failure is recovered, the content of data already sent is displayed (SOLUTION).

Toyoda & Hiromutsu are combinable because they are from the same field of endeavor.

At the time of the invention, it would have been obvious to a person of ordinary skill in the art to combine Hiromutsu with Toyoda.

The suggestion/motivation for doing so would have been to continue communication restoration from a power failure, as taught by Hiromutsu.

Therefore, it would have been obvious to combine Hiromutsu with Toyoda to obtain the invention as specified in claims 1,8, and 13.

For claims 6, 11, 19, Toyoda teaches including a confirming receipt of all of the electronic data by the e-mail server (10:30-40).
